Research and Teaching Skills Scholarships for Academic General Practice Registrars

Academic Registrar Scholarships

In 2009, the Department of General Practice at Monash University will be inviting applications for two, $10,000 Academic Registrar Scholarships. These scholarships will support registrars to gain further skills in teaching and/or research in family medicine. They are available to all registrars undertaking an academic registrar post.

What Monash University has to offer an Academic Registrar

Monash University is one of Australia's largest and most internationally engaged universities with campuses in Malaysia, Italy and South Africa, in addition to the six Victorian campuses. Undertaking an academic registrar position in the Department of General Practice gives a registrar the opportunity to work with leading researchers in a range of areas, for example chronic care, mental health, drug and alcohol, child sexual abuse or women's health; as well as gaining valuable teaching skills in one of the few remaining undergraduate medical courses in Australia.

Nature of the Scholarships

The scholarship will be awarded on the basis of a written application, consisting of:

1. A protocol of no more than 500 words outlining the study to be undertaken.

2. A description of no more than 250 words of why you would like to undertake this position at Monash University.
3. A current curriculum vitae.

This scholarship can be held concurrently with other scholarships that are available through AGPT, such as the GPET Registrar Research Fund.

Each $10,000 scholarship can only be applied for once during a single academic post.

Conditions of Application

- Applicants must be eligible to undertake an Academic Registrar position at Monash University
- Applicants must be currently undertaking general practice vocational training with an accredited regional training provider.
